TASP: The Association for Successful Parenting

*Advocating for parents with cognitive difficulties
since 2009*

About Us

TASP brings together some of the most knowledgeable and committed professionals and self-advocates to help YOU make a difference. Our work is centered around education, advocacy, and support. TASP has enabled an international community of providers, researchers, and self-advocates to come together to share efforts to improve outcomes for parents with intellectual disabilities.

TASP works to build the capacity of families, communities, and systems to support parents with cognitive difficulties, ensuring everyone has a chance to parent.

Our Strategy

Education

TASP offers a bi-yearly conference, webinars on a variety of supported parenting topics, as well as training for professionals, agencies, states, and systems. TASP's trainings are designed to increase a professional's ability to effectively serve parents with IDD.

Advocacy

TASP advocates at the local, state, and national level to fight for and ensure the rights of parents with IDD.

Support

TASP provides support for parents and professionals through resource sharing, a monthly newsletter, monthly parenting tips, access to professionals for resources and guidance, and more. TASP also offers individual and agency memberships, which includes access to archived webinars, a multitude of original resources for use in your life and work, discounts on trainings, and more.
